PREFACE

Central Water Commission (CWC) is the apex organization in the country dealing with collection and compilation of river discharge data on all major inter-state rivers in the country. At present, a network of 878 hydrological observation sites is being maintained by Central Water Commission which includes meteorological stations.

As on 1.6.2012, meteorological data are being collected at 852 stations including 76 exclusive met stations. There are 13 regional offices headed by Chief Engineers located in all major river basin states where the hydrological data collection is entrusted with. This data is being utilized by CWC for flood forecasts to issue advance warning to the state authorities during high flood situations besides planning and development of water resources projects in the country by various State Governments, Public Undertakings and Research Institutes.

I appreciate the hard work done and efforts made by Shri Ravi Shanker, Director, Shri Ram Jeet Verma, Dy Director and Shri H. P. Chaurasia, AD of RDC Directorate for bringing out the first edition of this publication titled " Meteorological Observation Stations in India under Central Water Commission".

I hope this booklet would be found useful by all the officers of CWC and State Governments in the planning and development of Water Resources in the country.
